

GJS Summer Program Q&A

Q: What documents are needed for me to apply for the Japanese visa?

A: Documents for visa application differ from country to country. Citizens from some countries and regions do not need visa to enter Japan. Ask your university or Japanese embassy or consulate general in your country for detailed information about visa application.

In general, visa application documentation has two components: the first component is documents you as the applicant need to prepare, and the second component is documents to be prepared by the guarantor and inviter in Japan.

The Global Japan Studies office will serve as your guarantor and inviter and will issue you the required documents. Notify the GJS office of your need as soon as possible.

Mail delivery of documents and visa application are very time-consuming. Start your preparation as soon as you have decided to come to Japan.

Q: Is it possible to join the summer program after it started, or withdraw before it ends? In either case, is program fee discount possible?

A: You are not allowed to join after the program started or to withdraw before it ends. Discount will not be available.

Q: My Japanese is very good so I don't want to attend the Japanese language classes. If so, can you give a discount from the program fee?

A: No discount will be given in the case you do not attend the Japanese language classes. We expect every participant to take the Japanese classes because the classes are not just about language; you also learn Japanese culture and society so it is for your benefit that you attend them.

Q: Do I have to book hotel myself?

A: You don't need to book hotel yourself. The GJS office will book hotel for all international participants. All the nights from June 30 – July 11 (check-out: July 12) are covered by the program fee.

If you will be in Japan before June 30 or after July 12, you will need to book hotel for those nights yourself.

Q: Are there pick-up or drop-off service at airport and hotel in Tokyo?

A: The GJS office does not provide pick-up or drop-off service, but before the program starts we will send you guidance for transportation from airport to hotel.

Public transportation in Tokyo is highly developed and very convenient so we don't think you need to worry about that.

Q: How do I get to the University of Tokyo from the hotel?

A: In the morning of the first day of the program, the GJS staff will meet everybody in the lobby of the hotel and walk together with you to the University.

Q: Are meals included in the program fee?

A: Breakfasts and lunches for the days having classes are included in the program fee. All dinners as well as meals for the days without lectures are not included. These will be on you.

On the final day of the program, group presentations and farewell party are scheduled. Everybody is required to participate in the presentations and the party.

Q: Does the program fee cover transportation expenses in Tokyo during the program?

A: No. The University of Tokyo regulations stipulate that the GJS office cannot pay for domestic travels of program participants. Domestic travels include your travels between airport and hotel, and shorts trips of fieldtrips in Tokyo.

One-way travel between airport and hotel costs 1000-3000 yen. Fieldtrip travels cost 6000-8000 yen in total.

It is very convenient to use IC cards such as SUICA and PASMO. They are available for purchase for 500 yen at the airport and all Tokyo Metro and subway stations. These IC cards can be used not just for riding trains but also for shopping at convenience stores and some vending machines.

You can check out the details of cards here: <http://www.pasmo.co.jp/en/>

Q: Will there be scholarship from the University of Tokyo or from Japan for this summer program?

A: The summer program will offer scholarship to several participants on a competitive basis.

Besides the program, Japan Student Services Organization (JASSO), which is a public funded institution outside the University of Tokyo, also provides scholarship every year, but it is not open for foreign individual student. The summer program will apply to JASSO and when JASSO scholarship is available it will be offered to summer program participants.

There may be scholarship available in your own country. We suggest you explore those opportunities as well.

Q: Can graduate students apply to this summer program?

A: Yes, the program is open to graduate students. All graduate students are welcome to apply.

Q: Is it necessary that I bring my own PC? Are there WIFI available during the program?

A: Yes, it is. The GJS office provides one or two PCs for your use but that's not enough for the whole group, so do bring your own.

Yes, the program will provide free WIFI on campus and during fieldtrips.

Q: Can I use the library and gym of the University of Tokyo during the program?

A: Yes. On the first day of program, you will receive the International Short-Term Program Card which you can use to access the libraries and the gym.

The University of Tokyo libraries have one of the largest collections of material in Japan. They will be very useful for your preparation for group presentation. We hope you will utilize these great library resources.

Q: I hold a Japanese passport. Can I apply to the GJS summer program?

A: Yes, you can. Citizenship is not important in our decision of acceptance and we welcome students of all nationalities, including that of Japan, to apply.
